SOURCE MATERIAL

On these pages will be given bibliographic notes of documentary material. The present list is confined largely to the publications issued as a result of the activities of the so-called House Inquiry and the investigations of the Department of State, and to the somewhat similar British series of Peace Handbooks prepared by the Historical Section of the Foreign Office. These documents, while not new, should be recorded because of their intrinsic value.

Publications of the League of Nations may be obtained from the American distributing agent, World Peace Foundation, 40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston 9, Mass.

Besides listing in subsequent issues source material on international relations generally, the editor will undertake at present to furnish information in these columns as to where specific documents may be found.
